SITE DESCRIPTION

Single-storey building with red brick plinth, plastered walls, steel windows, doors with Cape Revival gables. Cornerstone: "To the glory of God, Methodist Centenary School, this stone was laid by Rev Allen Lea, chairman of the district, 9th January 1937".

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This site displays a distinctive palm tree, and is a landmark building (1937). This site, and similar ones within "Die Vlakte," make tangible the absence of the community forced out under the Group Areas Act, with the demolition of their homes that followed their removal. This site in particular, as a school, has high social, associational, historical and intangible significance.

SITE HISTORY

LANDSCAPE SIGNIFICANCE

Mature trees along street edge.

CONTEXTUAL DESIGN

The school is a clear "type" and contributes to the presence of an institutional presence of the community that once lived in this area, and were forcibly removed under the Group Areas Act.
